Mongolian Moods – Pastoral Music and Dance from Inner Mongolia

The highlight of the 2007 Chinese New Year Celebrations

7.30pm Tuesday 13 Feb 2007 Lyric Theatre, QPAC

Over 700 years ago, Genghis Khan and his warriors conquered the world with his armored horses. Today, his talented offspring is overwhelming the world audience with their exclusive music and dance of the local fields and grasslands.

“Mongolian Moods” features 46 accomplished pastoral musicians direct from Genghis Khan’s homeland, presenting the essence of the legendary Mongolian music and art, and the pastoral elegance and ethnic flavour of Inner Mongolia. This elaborate production of exotic music and dance integrates the spirits of the thousand-year-old Mongol heritage with the most recent state of artistic life.

The highly acclaimed China Inner Mongolia Art Troupe stars the most competent musicians and artists from the Inner Mongolia Song And Dance Theatre Company. The Company is one of the largest performing companies in China with 12 art troupes and music ensembles, and has entertained audiences in over 30 countries in the world. Its successful performance at the John F. Kennedy Performing Arts Centre in the USA in September 2005 created a big stir in the audience. Also its superior a cappella choir has won a number of gold medals in various international choir competitions.

“Mongolian Moods” is specially designed for the Australian audiences, highlighting the most popular works of Inner Mongolia. The program is rather lavish, showcasing the unique and highest level of performances in the region, such as a throat singing, music combining the human voice and a wind instrument by one single player, legendary instruments, soul-stirring long melody, implicit pastoral love songs, colorful costumes, as well as the splendid tradition and modern songs and dances. Some of the music forms are entitled the cultural world heritage status.

The show is suitable for all ages and cultures. Projected English subtitles will help facilitate understanding of performances.

After success of organising oriental shows of “Golden Autumn Gala Night”, “Yarlha Shanbo” and “Music in Splendid Attire” in Australia, particularly the sell-out “My Dream” concert at QPAC Concert Hall in September 2005, “Mongolian Moods” by ACCCA will surely impress the audience with their superior interpretation and special ethnic flavors. This event is not to be missed.
